Malala Yousafzai, 17, has won the Nobel Peace Prize. She won jointly with the children's rights campaigner Kailash Satyarthi. Malala won two years after a gunman shot her in the head on a school bus. She recovered and toured the world speaking for the rights of girls to go to school. She said school, "is like walking through a magic door to your dreams". Malala is the youngest ever winner of the prize and the second Pakistani*.

Ms Yousafzai and Mr Satyarthi won the prize, "for their struggle...for the right of all children to education." Pakistan's Prime Minister congratulated Malala. He said Pakistan was proud. He added that: "Her achievement is unparalleled and unequalled." He told all children to follow her. Satyarthi said his award was for the many children, "who are victims...across the world". He said it was important for "an Indian and a Pakistani to fight for education.

* Correction: Pakistani Abdus Salam won the 1979 Nobel Prize in Physics, not the Peace Prize.
